HME Wireless Helps Major Retailer in Canada Take Boredom and Stress Out of Waiting for Prescriptions

ATLANTA, GA, MARCH 30, 2010 – HME Wireless, Inc. announces its newfound partnership with a major retailer in Canada, to equip each of the Mississauga, Ontario-based retailer's pharmacy locations with electronic pharmacy paging systems.

With HME Wireless' QuietCall IQ paging system, each pharmacy customer is provided with a pager upon dropping off a prescription. Similar to when restaurants use pagers to let patrons know when tables are ready, customers will no longer have to wait around a congested pharmacy, or keep checking back periodically, to see if their prescriptions are ready.

As an added benefit to customers, HME Wireless' pharmacy pagers are equipped with two lights: one to alert that a prescription is ready to be picked up, and another to notify guests if the pharmacist has a question. Pharmacies save time, not having to search around for someone, and customers benefit from faster turnarounds. Each pager features two panels that can be used for advertising, or to let customers know about current promotions. And as an additional convenience, pagers are available in 17 languages.

"This system enhances our pharmacy's productivity, and helps customers use their time more efficiently," says Pharmacy and Optical Systems Manager of the major retailer in Canada. "Instead of just sitting around, they're free to shop or browse — it's a more enjoyable experience. And if the pharmacist has questions, the customer can always be found."

Russ Ford, Vice President of Sales at HME Wireless, added "This is just one example of how we work with our clients to create win-win solutions that benefit both their associates and their customers."
